is himself the greatest peril to his country. Count Herbert Bismarck's resignation followed naturally upon that of his father. He had been his father's right-hand man and was looked to as his successor in some distant future. He was personally liked by the Emperor and was trusted business. It does not seem to have occurred to the Emperor that Count Bismarck would stand or fall with his father. Why not stand or fall with me? his wondering majesty is reported to have asked. He stood out against the son's resolve to share the father's fate, offered him leave of absence, and declined to accept his resignation. But the Count was firm, and the Emperor finally had to own that fidelity to a father might be as strong a motive as loyalty to a sovereign.

Count Waldersee, who has been the head, or one of the heads, of the opposition to Prince Bismarck, instead of seizing this moment to strengthen his position, thought it a good opportunity to have a quarrel of his own with the Emperor. The quarrel was not serious, and touched nothing more vital than a question of military etiquette. But Count Waldersee, to his master's astonishment, insists on a leave of absence, and goes to Cannes and San Remo on account of his health. By such slight signs as these does the Chief of Staff venture to express his displeasure with his august master; by these and no other.

Finally, it is the hour for us Americans once again to remind ourselves of one other thing; that Prince Bismarck has been a steadfast friend to America through his whole public career. kept Prussia benevolently neutral when Napoleon tried to organize a European cabal in favor of the Southern Confederacy. But for Prince Bismarck in Germany and Disraeli in England, that perfidious scheme might have succeeded.

never would listen to it," said Prince Bismarck. When the Emperor asked my counsel, I set my face against it, as an act of enmity to the United States, and I had only to remind the King that friendship with the United States was a policy traditional with Prussia from the day of Frederick the Great." In lesser matters he was equally stanch. He renounced and rebuked his own officer in Samou, sooner than tolerate acts leading to a possible quarrel with the United States, and his hand is visible through the Samean Treaty, a hand then, as ever, outstretched in cordial go will to America and Americans.

The Prince of Wales's visit to Berlin continued for some days after he was officially supposed to be gone. Now he is actually gone. The Emperor has showered attention on him as if he were the present instead of probably the future King of England. That unlucky speech of the Emperor at dinner about the united British fleet and German army, with its not less unlucky reference to Waterloo, gave big offence to France. and French comment on it has continued all this week. The Prince of Wales at first was praised for taking no notice in his reply of his nephew's extraordinary language. Now it seems to be thought that he should somehow have dissociated himself from it, nobody quite explains how-The foolish story that Prince Bismarck refused to see the Prince was but short-lived. He saw him twice, and the Prince was his guest at luncheon. The French detect politics in this also; quite wrongly, for of polities the Prince of Wales is G. W. S. never to be suspected.

THE WEEK IN SOCIETY.

YOUNG GIRLS AT THE OPERA-ENTERTAIN.

ING MME. ALBANI-CONFLICT. ING DINNERS.

Lenten diversion, but, with this at hand, society did not grasp at it with much eagerness and the boxes in the Metropolitan Opera House presented many strange faces and people not in the attire which is looked for at a performance of opera. During the regular season a bonnet is never seen in an opera-box at an evening performance, but such has not been the case for the last week. It was rather unusual to see so many young girls at an evening performance, but the indulgence was owing to the fact that Patti may not again be heard in this country. On Monday night there was a number of beautiful women present. Mrs. Henry Sloane, in black with shoulder knots of Mme, de Barrios, in pale yellow with many gems, was Mrs. Kernochan's guest. Miss Hargons in pink sat in Mrs. Whitney's box, and Miss Bend in white with her mother, Mrs. Lloyd Bryc: was with he Mrs. Edward Cooper. Among others who have been seen almost nightly at the German opera were Mrs Paran Stevens, Mrs. H. Victor Newcomb, Mrs. Samuel Colgate, Mrs. Eugene Cruger, Mrs. Alfred de Castro, Miss Amy Townsend, Mrs. Austin Corbin, Mrs. Robert Goelet and Mrs. George Henry Warren.

Artists like Mme. Emma Albani Gye and Mile. Rhea have been entertained during the week at small gatherings. As a rule, when Mme. Albani is is America her time is so much occupied with her professional duties that she can accept little attention though many people stand ready to show her every courtesy in their prec. On Friday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Alfred de Castro gave a small tea in honor of Mme. Albani, and during the week they will give her a dinner. Muse, Albani and Muse, Nordica occupy good positions in England, having the intimate acquaintance of members of the Royal family. The Queen is particularly gracious to Mme. Albani, and the Princess of Wales has Mme. Nordica very frequently at Marlborough House for a quiet cup of tea and a little music. During Easter week a reception will be given for Mme. Nordica.

Among the diversions of the week the concert of Miss Margaret Elliot and the afternoon of recitations given by Miss Amy Baker have brought together a large contingent of society people. Miss Elliot has been in New-York since December, after two years' study with Mme. Marchesi, gaining many warm friends. Miss Baker is well established in New-York, where her readings are listened to with much pleasure. On Thursday afternoon Miss Eaker recited with much success a poem written by Mrs. Kendal, and given her in manuscript, entitled, "A Recipe for a Kiss.

An interesting amateur concert in aid of the Italian Mission will be held in Chickering Hall on Wednesday evening, April 16, when Mrs. Curtis's orchestra will This orchestra was started three years ago by Mrs. John G. Curtis in her own drawing room and for her own pleasure. The conductor was Theodore John who had formerly directed the City Orchestra in Freiburg in Baden. Mr. John is still the conductor, and under his tuition a number of young musicians have been graduated into leading public orchestras of New The members of Mrs. Curtis's orchestra are meand women, boys and girls, some of whom pay a small fee for their instruction, while others are admitted free, and what was begun as a pastime is now a school for those auxious to enter the profession. two weeks after Easter will be somewhat gay, but the bsolute gayety will be confined to Easter Week, when there are to be a few weddings and general dances. Mrs. Whitney's dance on Easter Tuesday will be a ball, although the cards style it a small dance, but nearly 400 people are expected, and, as list, that number is small. Mrs. Le Roy Jones will probably give a dance for Mrs. Archie Machay, and Mrs. John Bloodgood, of Washington Squase, a small dance for her young son. The last of the Sherry subscription dances will be on April 12, when H. Le Grand Cannon will lead the cotillon with Mrs. S. V. R.

subscription dances will be on April 12, when H. Le Grand Cannon will lead the cotillon with Mrs. S. V. K. Cruger.

To-night Mrs. Paran Stevens will give a dinner party. Her guests will include among others the Duchess of Marlborough, Frince Yturbide and Mme. Albani.

The Duchess of Marlborough was the centre of attraction at the opera on Friday night, when she was in the box of R. L. Cutting, dressed in black, and wearing few Jewels, her most noticeable ornament being a diamond star worn at the back of the head. Mrs. Blanche Cruger, who was in the box, was mistaken by some for the Duchess, as she wore a tiara of pearls and diamonds which looked not unlike a coronet. After the opera the Duchess held a reception in the Thirty minthest, lobby of the Opera House, Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. Nicholas Fish, Mrs. Fred Bronson, Miss Post and many others taking that opportunity of greeting their old friend. Last night Her Grace of Marlborough went to see "The City Directory" with a party which included Mrs. Paran stevens, R. L. Cutting, Arthur Leary and others. Sir Roderick Cameron and Miss Cameron gave a handsome dinner party last night at their house, No. 18 West Fortieth'st. The table was decerated with pink and yellow flowers. SECRETARY TRACE IN TOWN.

Secretary Tracy, who spent yesterday in this city, vill return to Washington this afternoon with his son. When asked by a Tribune reporter about the story published vesterday, that one of his former servants had confessed that she had set his house on fire, the secretary said that he did not believe it. "That is, I kink," he continued, "a rehash of the stories in circaink," he continued, "a rehash of the stories in eirenlation in the Capital at the time. But the servant used no motive for such an action. She had been with us for eleven years, and was greatly attached to Mrs. Tracy. I do not think either that she was insame. I do not think the rumor will be confirmed."
The Secretary would give no opinion upon the McCalla inquiry, neither did he know when the Enterprise or the Essex would be ready to sail.

AROUND THE WORLD WITH MR. GRISWOLD

LARGE AUDIENCES PLEASED BY HIS HUMOR

It may seem paradoxical, but it is really necessar; to go at least twice around the world with A. Minor Griswold in order to do it once. Mr. Griswold's "tour around the world " is so full of good things that there is too much to assimilate at one sitting. erowded houses which Mr. Griswold has had all last week show that the public relish his rollicking humor, and last evening Hardman Hall was filled to overflowing. According to Mr. Griswold's own account, during his career as a lecturer he has enjoyed his full share of ups and downs, and he now good himoredly recalls the downs and joins the audience in laughing at his past misfortunes. In one of his far Western experiences he lectured on a panorama of Joseph and his brothers for one of his professional brethren who was sick at the time, and the andience was so appreclative that he found it necessary to leave town New York audiences, however, show their appreciation in a less demonstrative manner, but Mr. Griswold should certainly feel gratified at his success.

A man who can say something new about Brooklyn A man who can say something new about Brooklyn Bridge deserves credit. Said Mr. Griswold: "Brooklyn Bridge is supported by wire cables and a small tax on passengers. The tons of wire used in its construction give some idea of the amount of wire pulling necessary for the enterprise in the bestinning.
No great enterprise succeeds in New York without wire pulling. The wires are pulled in New York—the tells ring in Albaty. There was a good deal of opposition to the Bridge, and some Brooklyn people maye not yet get oxing it. "Laughter."
The stereopticon views and Mr. Griswold's comments upon them are amining. ments upon them are amusing.

Many columns of The Tribune are filled to-day with short, bright, crisp, little advertis ments describing in a brie, direct way the varied requirements of a host of people. You will find them on the eighth and night price.

About 100 members of the Delta Kappa Epsilor

Club were present at the fifth annual dinner of the club which was held at the club-house, No. 435 Fifth ave., last night. The walls and ceilings of the parlor, where the dinner was served, were gay with flags and flowers among which the mysterious emblems of the fraternity were intermingled and the rooms were crowded with the loyal members of D. K. E., young and old graduates of twenty lifferent colleges. General Wager Swayne presided, and among those present were Charlton T. and Granville P. Hawes, the former presidents of the cinb; stephen A. Walker, A. B. Hepburn, Robert Snodgrass, of Pennsylvania; H. B. Stapler, Captain Hugh Garden, president of the Southern Society; Pro-fessor Frank Drisler, Assemblyman T. D. Henderson,
